

EAST BERLIN R. R. COMPANY MAY BE DISSOLVED SOON

Shareholders of the East Berlin Railroad company will meet in East Berlin on April 29 at 7 p. m. for the purpose of acting on the recommendation of the board of directors that the company be dissolved.

Should the shareholders accept the recommendation, an application will be made to the Public Utility commission for permission to cease operations of the railroad.

The East Berlin railroad, one of the shortest in the state, received its original charter in 1876. There was a re-organization of the company in 1915, but it continued to operate under the provisions of the first charter.

At first passengers were carried on the eight-mile line from East Berlin to Berlin Junction, near New Oxford, but with the establishment of a bus line for that section of Adams county, the passenger service was stopped and since that time only freight has been handled.

The railroad is still in operation. Its train makes about two or three trips over the route each week picking up freight.

If the dissolution of the line is approved the company intends to offer its equipment for sale, an officer stated today.

Daniel E. Brandt is president of the railroad, with Dr. Eugene Elgin as vice president, and William P. Baker, secretary-treasurer. All are residents of East Berlin.

TEACHER DIES

Carlisle, Pa., April 5 (AP)—Prof. Franklin A. Kuller, head of the Latin department of Friends school, Baltimore, died in Carlisle hospital today of injuries received in an automobile accident at Greenpark in adjoining Perry county Monday.

WITH the same calm and steadiness that has marked his life which has spanned a century, Major Calvin Gilbert looked forward without undue excitement today toward Saturday when he will observe quietly in his pleasant red brick home at 144 Springs avenue his 100th birthday anniversary.

So far as is known he is the first citizen of Gettysburg ever to reach the age of 100 years. "I've had so many birthdays, I don't pay much attention to them any more," the amazingly "young" old gentleman told a Gettysburg Times reporter. No special celebration has been planned but a week ago his host of friends started sending a stream of cards, flowers and other messages bearing congratulations and best wishes.

Early this afternoon the Gettysburg high school band and a group of citizens marched to the Gilbert home where a spray of flowers was presented to Major Gilbert by William I. Shields, a close friend, and the group extended congratulations.

Gettysburg's oldest citizen and its only surviving veteran of the Civil war can remember when this town had only a handful of citizens, not more than a score or so, and when a great deal of the surrounding rural district was wooded. Born a quarter century before the battle was fought here that made the town famous, he has watched the town grow and change so greatly that "no one could recognize it" as the town of the 1840's.

Asked about his "recipe" for attaining a ripe old age, Major Gilbert chuckled and replied "Don't worry—and vote the straight republican ticket."

He has lived up to both provisions of the formula. He declares that he never does—and never has—become excited. As far as the voting is concerned he reminded his questioner that he cast his first vote for Lincoln when the Civil war President sought his first term as President and he has voted the republican ticket every year since that time. Last fall he cast his ballot for Governor James.

That he continues to keep busy up to the century mark was proved by the fact that when the Times reporter visited his home one afternoon this week he found Major Gilbert at work at his desk writing letters and mailing out checks to cover bills received at the first of the month. He wrote in a strong, clear hand.

He enjoys occasional automobile rides and soon will spend hours on the wide front porch of his home, moving from his sunny bay window seat where he spends hours watching friends pass and waving a cheery greeting—and no doubt spending much time reviewing with a clear memory the eventful years of his long life.

His legs are "not so good" and prevent him from walking up-town as he did until the last few years. Danger of falling prompted the removal of his bed from the second to the first floor of his home several weeks ago. Until that time he had climbed the stairs each evening about 9 o'clock and returned to the first floor shortly before noon the next day. He always sleeps soundly.

He enjoys chats with friends who call frequently upon him and his only daughter, Miss Kate Gilbert, who resides with her father.

"I don't feel a bit older at 100 than I did 10 years ago," Major Gilbert observed and recalled that few days in his life found him confined to bed by illness. "About the longest time I ever was confined to bed was while I was in the army and received a heel injury while marching. I was in the hospital for about three or four days but that was the only time I was a patient during the more than four years I served in the army."

"You know, the first time I tried to enlist in the army, the surgeon rejected me—said I had only one lung and that I wasn't strong enough for army life. I insisted on joining so they finally took me." Major Gilbert recalled. For more than 10 years he has been the only survivor of his company in the 87th regiment of the Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry.

Always Kept Busy

THEN speaking more seriously, he asserted his belief that avoiding worrying and getting excited has done much to prolong his life. "I've always kept busy too," he added, "and I believe that's important."

That he continues to keep busy up to the century mark was proved by the fact that when the Times reporter visited his home one afternoon this week he found Major Gilbert at work at his desk writing letters and mailing out checks to cover bills received at the first of the month. He wrote in a strong, clear hand.

Health Improved in Army

WHEN Major Gilbert enlisted here in 1861 as a private, he weighed only 130 pounds but his health improved in the army and soon he weighed 160 pounds, thriving on the rigors of army life.

He has for years been the only survivor of the "old Gettysburg Independent Blues" who enlisted for three months at the outbreak of the war when Lincoln issued his first call for volunteers. When that period ended he re-enlisted in Company F of the 87th Pennsylvania regiment under Colonel C. H. Buehler of Gettysburg for a term of three years. After about 15 months with that unit, he was transferred to the commissary department at Washington in which he remained until November, 1865, when he was honorably discharged. While in Washington, he was commissioned by President Lincoln as a captain and now holds a commission as brevet major "for faithful and meritorious service" from President Johnson.

Major Gilbert recalls having seen President Lincoln almost daily, while he was stationed in the national capital. On one occasion when both men had attended an officer's funeral Lincoln laid his hand on Gilbert's shoulder and inquired: "How are you, Captain?" On several other occasions he shook hands with the Civil war President.

At the time of the burning of Chambersburg he was with the commissary department there and was the last Union officer to leave the town, taking out a train with provisions and citizens shortly before the Confederates entered. He was in the battles of Cold Harbor, Fort Stephens and Spotsylvania and spent six months in the West Virginia campaign.

Gives Views on Progress

The old soldier questions whether many of the changes of the last decade really make for progress and sees politics taking too great a hand in affairs of the country for constructive forward movement. He is not greatly concerned about the present European situation.

He places the greatest amount of "progress" or industrial change in the last two decades of his 100 years and gives the automobile credit for being responsible for more industrial development and "changes in the times" than the railroad.

The laments of the so-called "old timers" about the good old winters being a thing of the past are not supported by Major Gilbert, who

ANTI-MACING BILL AWAITS FINAL ACTION

Harrisburg, April 5 (AP)—Governor James' proposed anti-macing bill neared enactment today after narrowly missing conversion into a ban on voluntary political contributions by state employees.

The bill—which James waved from the inaugural stand shortly after he took the oath of office last January—was placed in position for final senate action.

Only Lieutenant Governor Samuel Lewis' first tie-breaking vote Tuesday kept the democrats from writing in an amendment that would have prevented any political party from receiving funds from a state employee.

The vote had been tabulated in the press box as 24 to 23 in favor of the amendment, but Lewis declared Senator Robert Lee Jacobs (D-Cumberland), who was recorded as having voted for the changes, was absent when the roll was called. He pronounced the vote a 23-23 tie and cast his ballot against the change.

Senator Anthony Cavalcante (D-Fayette) protested the lieutenant governor had no right to vote on legislation. Lewis over-ruled him, declared the amendment offered by Senator George Kunkel (D-Dauphin) defeated. The measure was passed on second reading. It already had house approval.

Several previous attempts at amendments were beaten down in the hour or more of debate. Senator Israel Steifel (D-Phila) tried to change the bill to permit state employees to give up to $1,000 to political parties. J. Albert Reed (D-Washington) attempted to ban only contributions or more than $1,000.

Lawyers Not Included
Democrats lost out, too, in an attempt to write a provision covering lawyers into a house bill extending the statute of limitations for prosecution of former state authorities accused of official misdeeds. The bill moved up for final action.

Efforts to at least partially meet the demands of unpaid teachers, some of whom have threatened to strike April 15 if their salaries still are not forthcoming, were shunted to the senate by completion of house action of a $1,000,000 appropriation bill.

Favors Law to Conserve State's Supply of Gas

Harrisburg, April 5 (AP) — Conservation of natural gas as a means of protecting Pennsylvania's stake in its natural resources, and the industry was urged today by a republican assemblyman from the gas fields.

Rep. E. Kent Kane (R-McKean) sponsored a bill to "establish a system for regulating the reasonable removal of gas" by the Department of Internal Affairs.

"I want to get rid of this business of having seven-cent gas one day and 75-cent gas the next," Kane declared. He explained that without control, anyone who wanted to sink a gas well could go ahead, with the result that production surged and declined, alternately dropping prices and shooting them up.

His bill would declare natural gas "a migratory mineral resource of the commonwealth which is incapable of being held in place."

UTILITY IS ACCUSED OF POLITICAL ACTIVITY

Washington, April 5 (AP) — The Securities commission accused the $250,000,000 Union Electric company of Missouri today of illegally making contributions to political parties and "unknown" persons running for state and other offices.

It was the first time the S.E.C. has charged a utility company with making political contributions in violation of federal law.

Federal law provides prison terms of as much as five years and fines up to $10,000 for some of the violations charged in the commission's order.

Three smaller brothers and a boarder at the home smashed out a bedroom window, squeezed through, and sought vainly to pull out the victim, Charles Heiman, who had been blind for 20 years.

Cleveland, April 5 (AP) — The C.I.O. United Automobile Workers presented today the solid front urged by the Congress of Industrial Organizations, with President Roland J. REPORT IS ENDED

Philadelphia, April 5 (AP)—Detective Joseph Grady, sitting in the police station, was writing a report of a chase in which a stolen truck was recovered and a man arrested. Glancing out a window he saw the truck—and his own automobile in flames. To his report he aptly added: "Two men who escaped are believed to have set fire to the truck in front of the station in an effort to destroy evidence."

STORMS DELAY CLIPPER

Southampton, England, April 5 (AP)—Storms over the English channel forced the 42-ton Pan-American Yankee clipper to turn back today from a flight to Foyes, Ireland. Major Calvin Gilbert, Civil War Veteran, Will Be First Gettysburgian to Reach 100; Don't Worry and Keep Busy, He Advises

Reminded of Changes
RECALLING early experiences of his boyhood days, Major Gilbert spoke of an old gatekeeper by the name of Zeigler who used to live here. "He was only about 90 but we kids used to go around to look at him as a sort of curiosity," he said. The town's oldest citizen cannot recall during the last century that any person other than himself lived to attain that age.

Major Gilbert was reminded this afternoon of the great changes that have taken place in the last 100 years, or within his lifetime, in the presentation speech given when Mr. Shields handed him the bouquet of flowers.

He said in part: "You have seen the passing of the tallow candle, the oil lamp and the gas jet and the arrival of the electric lamp. You have seen the saddle horse and the covered wagon replaced by the railroad, electric car, automobile and airplane. You have seen the ships of the sky used for industry and for glorious adventure. You have seen the canal boat and sail boat replaced by the cruiser and submarine. The scythe and cradle have given way to the modern binder and the power reaper in your time. You have seen the melodians and the tinkling spinnet replaced by the modern, mechanical musical instruments—the graphophone, pipe organ, piano and the radio with all its developments. You have witnessed the fall of empires and great changes in the map of the world—and above all, the triumph of science."

Major Gilbert was born in a house that stood at the present location of the Blue Parrot tea room on Chambersburg street on April 8, 1839. Eleven years ago he celebrated his eighty-ninth birthday anniversary with a family dinner at his birthplace and prescribed these principles for reaching "a ripe old age"—"Never worry, never become excited, eat plenty and sleep good."

He was married March 12, 1862, at Lancaster, by the Rev. George Hencock. His wife was the former Lovina L. Rex, formerly of Bendersville. They were married while he was in the army but home on furlough. They had five children, three of whom are living. They are Miss Kate Gilbert, who resides with her father, and Calvin K. and William D. Gilbert, both of Hanover street. A younger sister of Major Gilbert, Miss Mary Gilbert, Chambersburg, is the only other one surviving of a family of eight.

Mrs. Gilbert died nearly 16 years ago. She succumbed to infirmities of age on August 9, 1923, after an illness of three weeks. She and her husband were of nearly the same age. She was 84 when she died.

Operated Foundry Here

MR. Gilbert received a "working knowledge" of the three R's in the Gettysburg schools but left the institutions of learning at the age of 12 to become an apprentice to a coach builder and was engaged in that business when the Civil war broke out.

After his honorable discharge from the army he entered the merchandising business in Chambersburg but three years later, 1868, purchased a foundry business. He was in business there about 20 years. In 1885 he moved to Gettysburg and opened a foundry and machine shop on Buford avenue where he cast most of the large guns and carriages placed on the Gettysburg battlefield and also furnished guns for Valley Forge and others of the nation's battle scenes.

In March of 1917 when he was in his late seventies he doubled the size of his foundry plant with the growth of his business. He retired about 15 years ago. Before and since that time he has taken an active part in community affairs.

Former Council Member

At Chambersburg and here he was active in republican politics and represented both counties at political conventions on many occasions. He was a school director for 18 years in Chambersburg and served five terms on the Gettysburg borough council.

He took an active part in the town's development and was a charter member of the Chamber of Commerce.

He is the oldest surviving member of St. James Lutheran church both as to age and years of membership. He was baptized as an infant in that church.

Another title to which he may lay claim is that of being the oldest Mason in Adams and Franklin counties and probably the oldest in the state. He joined the order in 1864 in Chambersburg and later transferred his membership to the Good Samaritan lodge here.

He is one of the original members of the military order of the Loyal Legion of the United States and has held high office in that organization.

In 1934 he was made an honorary life member of the Elks lodge during the state convention here.

Only Skelly Post Survivor

HIS failing sight has been a source of some inconvenience to the old soldier but on his own word it has not barred him from enjoying the last 10 years of his life as much as any other decade. He has submitted to several operations for the removal of cataracts, but he lost the sight of his left eye nearly a decade ago. The other eye has done double duty and still enables him to read a newspaper to some extent.

In line with a regular custom he attended Memorial Day exercises here last year. His most recent public act was to place a wreath on the grave of Albert J. Lentz in the National cemetery during exercises last Armistice Day.

Recently as the last survivor of the Corporal Skelly post No. 9 of the G. A. R. he transferred to the Gettysburg Camp Sons of Veterans the Skelly post's extensive collection of pictures, relics and other valuable mementos of the Civil war days.

The demonstration at the Gilbert home this afternoon by friends, neighbors and members of the Sons of Veterans and the American Legion was advanced from Saturday because no band will be available on that day.

HAD NO RECORDS

IN checking over the list of Gettysburg's oldest residents in the past, the late Keziah Cuff, colored, was mentioned as being a resident of the borough who had passed her 100th birthday anniversary.

She was said to have passed the century mark, but there were no records available to substantiate the claim.

EXAMPLE OF WIT

Philadelphia, April 5 (AP) — Spontaneity is the soul of wit says Charles A. Krull, voted the wittiest senior at St. Joseph's college. To wit — "Fellow tells me he felt like a Philadelphia because he was born on a train passing through. So I up and quips 'I can see you've been trained from infancy'."

ENGLAND DENIES MANNING GUNS

London, April 5 (AP)—Prime Minister Chamberlain told the house of commons today that he personally gave directions that British newspapers should suppress or discount Earl Stanhope's "man the guns" speech because it gave an incorrect impression.

Chamberlain said he had acted to "spare the public unnecessary agitation" over the declaration made by Stanhope, first lord of the admiralty, Tuesday night.

The prime minister said amid laughter and cheers: "Apparently my efforts to spare the public unnecessary agitation were not altogether successful but the incident will at any rate have served to demonstrate the constant readiness of the navy for all eventualities."

Chamberlain said Stanhope's statement was "unpremeditated" and denied that the first lord of the admiralty had asked the press to give special prominence to his statement.

The prime minister's tendency to treat the incident as a misunderstanding left the impression that Stanhope's position in the cabinet would not be impaired.

Stanhope in a speech Tuesday night declared that anti-aircraft guns of the fleet were manned "to be ready for anything."

The declaration provoked sharp repercussions. The premier's office issued a denial. The admiralty asked the press to suppress the statement.

Chamberlain was understood to have sought the advice of his cabinet ministers on whether to ask for Stanhope's resignation.

He was said to take a grave view of the speech because of the effect it might have upon the delicate European situation during the defensive alliance discussions with Poland—which already have inspired nazi charges of an attempt to "encircle" Germany.

May Broaden Italy's Power

Rome, April 5 (AP)—Greater freedom for Italian troop movements to Albania was forecast in political circles today as a result of the expected strengthening of the Italian-Albanian defensive alliance. "The treaty of Tirana, signed in 1927, provided for dispatch of Italian troops to Albania if the latter requested such aid against a war danger."

Some foreign observers considered it likely that the treaty would be broadened to permit Italian forces to help King Zog to crush any revolt in his little domain across the Adriatic from the heel of the Italian boot.

Hitler to Rest

Berlin, April 5 (AP)—Chancellor Hitler began today a 13-day stay at his large, comfortable retreat near Brechtsgaden. He left Berlin for southern Germany Tuesday night after a trip that started March 22 with a voyage to his newly-acquired Memel and a cruise in the North sea to heavily-fortified Helgoland.

He intends to observe Easter with members of his immediate entourage and to remain at the chalet until April 18, two days before his 50th birthday anniversary which all Germany will celebrate.

HEIR IS BORN TO ALBANIAN THRONE

Tirana, Albania, April 5 (AP)—An heir to the Albanian throne—a crown prince with American blood—was born today to Queen Geraldine and King Zog I.

Birth of the prince of the Albanians was announced with an artillery salute of 101 guns which gave the signal for elaborate celebrations throughout this tiny adriatic kingdom.

Queen Geraldine, the former Countess Geraldine Apponyi, of Hungary, was married to King Zog last April.

The queen's father was the late Count Julius Nagy-Apponyi and her mother, the former countess, is Mrs. Gladys Stewart Girault, an American now living in southern France.

NEW HITLER DECREE

Berlin, April 5 (AP)—Chancellor Hitler issued a decree today making it compulsory for all German boys and girls from 10 to 18 years to belong to the Hitler youth. The organization gives training in nazi precepts and pre-military instruction for boys. German boys henceforth will be obliged to serve eight years in the Hitler youth, the six months in the labor service and two years in the army.

GIRL, 8, INJURED

WHEN HIT BY CAR
Gloria Neiderer, eight-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard L. Neiderer, Midway, was injured, not seriously, when she was struck by an automobile in front of her home at noon Tuesday. The child was treated by Dr. George Thomassey, Carlisle street, for brushburns of the knee and a torn ligament near the left collarbone.

The child was returning from St. Vincent's school, where she is a pupil, when the mishap occurred. She was crossing the street to her home, a short distance west of the borough line, when the car knocked her down. The car, reported to have been operated by William Miller, Midway, was brought to an immediate stop and the driver went to the child's assistance.

Training Camp Briefs

Baton Rouge, La.—Johnny Wittig, the young hurler from Baltimore, must learn to be a little more deceitful if he is to stick with the New York Giants. Wittig has plenty of "stuff" and has no difficulty finding the center of the plate, but he does it too often and shows by his actions what he's going to throw. More concealment and cutting of the corners are Manager Bill Terry's prescription.

San Antonio, Tex.—Red-haired Cy Blanton appears to have won the honor of pitching the Pirates' opening game against Cincinnati for the third consecutive year. In 21 innings of flinging this spring he has allowed only six runs, two unearned, and he fanned four St. Louis Browns in seven innings Tuesday.

Lakeland, Fla.—Al Todd, Brooklyn's recently acquired catcher who has been burned up by the criticism he received in connection with the Pirates' collapse last fall, wants Pie Traynor to know that he has been given Babe Phelps' cleanup position in the Dodge batting order. "Wait until Traynor hears about this," he shouted when he was told, and he hopes Pie didn't miss the news of Tuesday's two homers. With Paul (no-longer Dizzy) Trout and Tommy Bridges hurling for Detroit, the Dodgers and Tigers played their last exhibition game here today before heading north.

Little Rock, Ark.—The Phillies today were due to get their first look at a $25,000 pitcher, Harry Matusak, who once hurled for the Athletics. Manager Doc Prothro Tuesday announced the conditional purchase of Matusak from the Baltimore Internationals.

Columbia, S. C.—Cincinnati fans, who have made a habit of giving the razzberry to shortstop Billy Myers, will have to revise their opinion of him if he keeps up the burning pace he has set during the training season. He smacked a homer, double

Dallas, Tex.—Outfielder Tommy Henrich, who has been filling in for Lou Gehrig at first base for the Yankees, is hoping Lou has a good year. "I'd rather play the outfield," he explains. "I think I can hold my own out there, but I don't kid myself about being a finished first baseman. The position is new to me."

Local Team Will Be Organized Friday

A meeting for the purpose of organizing a Gettysburg baseball team as an entry in the Adams county baseball league will be organized in the fire engine house Friday evening at 7 o'clock.

TREACHEROUS TYPHOID FEVER

In the Boer War and the Spanish-American War, typhoid fever killed more soldiers than all other casualties. Also, in the recent World War, typhoid fever was responsible for the deaths of vast numbers of men, especially in the Russian armies, where preventive treatments were for the most part disregarded.

We are told that approximately 22,146 people were stricken with typhoid fever in the United States during 1934, and of this number 4162 died from this preventable disease (latest complete government report).

The disease is more prevalent during summer months, since many people on vacation jaunts become infected from polluted drinking water.

Typhoid fever can be prevented by three injections of Parke-Davis Typhoid Vaccine given at intervals of one week. However, persons under treatment should avoid polluted water and foods. Statistics show that the majority of inoculated people are protected against this disease for a period of two years or more by this preventive measure.

MEDITERRANEAN ISSUE KEEPING NATIONS ALERT

By DEWITT MACKENZIE Associated Press Foreign Affairs Writer

New York, April 5 — Every once in a while the European democracy-dictatorship bonfire gives out a blast of flame as though somebody suddenly had applied a blow to the bottom and given a lusty heave — like the village blacksmith's forge in action.

That hot spurt of fire will be the Mediterranean issue coming up through — the struggle to see who shall control this all-important ocean thoroughfare of empires. Britain and France and Italy call it their imperial life-line, and many other countries are vitally interested as well.

After all's said and done, that fundamental problem forms the background of much of the European strife. He who would dominate Europe must rule the waves of the Mediterranean these days.

Now it has flashed out in a small but indicative way in two spots at once — little Albania, on the Adriatic, and the great Near East port and hinterland of Alexandretta, Syria.

Britain suspects Mussolini of wanting to occupy Albania (already under Italian protection), and Paris heard that Turkey intended to annex Alexandretta which until last year was governed by France under a league of nations mandate, and now is nominally independent.

Denial of such intentions came from both Rome and Ankara, but the situations still remained interesting and important. Here's what happened:

First off there were unconfirmed reports in Rome that Italy had

He remembered that nothing worth while is given away—excepting Time—and Opportunity of which every American has an abundant share. At all costs, he kept the spirit of youth—Confidence, Courage, Vision, Action. It worked for him. It kept him young. It made America.

massed troops with the idea of making a move to strengthen her control over her small neighbor, England — ever alert in watching her Mediterranean interests — promptly dropped a tip for Mussolini not to adopt Herr Hitler's policies of expansion. In other words, Britain advised Il Duce to let Albania alone.

London took the position that any Italian action affecting Albanian independence would be a violation of the Anglo-Italian agreement of a year ago. That provided among other things for the maintenance of the status quo in the Mediterranean by both parties.

Albania lies on the Adriatic right across from Italy, and on waters which join the Mediterranean. Any advantage which Mussolini might gain in extending his already considerable control would seem to rest in Albania's value as a naval and military base.

Albania is a country of fierce fighting men, and is fairly primitive in spots. It's half the size of Maine and has about the same population — 800,000. Mountains occupy much of it, and over these roam crag-jumping, gun-toting hillmen who are likely to shoot on sight. Part of Albania's fame rests in the facts that King Zog has five charming sisters, three of whom visited America last year, and that his majesty married the lovely Countess Geraldine Apponyi of Hungary, whose mother is an American.

The Story of the First Easter: III

Judas Betrays Jesus
After the Last Supper

The dramatic story of events leading up to the first Easter is here retold from the Gospels by Frederick C. Grant, D.D., Professor of Biblical Theology at Union Theological Seminary,
New York. The reference at the end of each installment is to a Gospel account.

THE ANCIENT FESTIVAL of a Passover centered in a common meal which the whole family ate together.

The food was lamb that had first been sacrificed and then roasted, unleavened bread, a sauce of bitter herbs, and several cups of wine.

Special psalms were sung, too,
the Scripture story of the release from Egypt was read, and special prayers were said over each cup of wine. The sacred banquet lasted until midnight.

We are not certain of the exact date of the Last Supper, but Christians have always looked upon it as either the Passover meal itself, or a meal anticipating the Passover by one day.

Sacrament Instituted

The importance of it lay in Jesus' words and actions, when he took bread and broke it and gave it to his disciples and said, "This is my body"; and then took a cup of the wine and gave thanks, and said,
"This is my blood."

For millions of Christians today,
though centuries after the event,
this was the institution of the Sacrament of Communion, which Jesus himself gave to his church.

Tradition has it that the Supper was celebrated in a house on the western hill in Jerusalem; all we are sure of is that it was in "an upper room."

It was dangerous for Jesus to be seen in the city. This day he sent two disciples on ahead to make ready for the meal, and came himself with the others only when the hour arrived.

It was to be his last supper with his own, the closest group of companions he had upon earth. And all his words and actions during the meal were meant to bind them more closely than ever to him.

Whatever might happen now, he and they were forever united into one. Not just because they shared a sacred meal, which in the ancient Orient meant something sacra-

THE GENTLE INFECTION OF PEACE

HONOLULU, T. H. — The island of Oahu, on which Honolulu is located, is probably one of the most heavily fortified spots in the world —
and yet there is little evidence of the fact as you stroll the streets, bathe in the famous waters of the Pacific at Waikiki and drive over a country rich in the production of sugar and pineapples, and a veritable garden of natural beauty — strewn with ever blooming flowers.

Birds sing all day long. The Hawaiians have no word for Weather!
No one worries about it. Rains come here and there — and leave a path of rainbows behind. I visited the lovely artistic home of Mr. and Mrs.
John M. Kelly, located high upon the shore of the Pacific and we watched the Sunset at sea. Then we crossed to the other side of the house and viewed the beautiful mountains with their ever floating clouds, casting their shadows to the slopes below.

I wish to add right here that I met two very fine artists at this home. Mr. Kelly's etchings are among the finest done by an American, deserving the highest rank. He has caught the spirit and the soul of this country and the native Hawaiians. Mrs. Kelly's modelled heads are beautiful and I wish that people on the mainland could see more of their sincere work.

People do not rush in Hawaii. They take their time. Somehow, however, things get done here in a big way. The infection of peace takes hold of workers and visitors alike. People come to Hawaii from the mainland, and from all parts of the world. They talk business, and come with worried faces — and all of a sudden — they stop such talk, and the lines of the face go away — and they begin to talk about beauty and the really worthwhile things of life!

Mr. Lester McCoy came to Honolulu 20 years ago from Peoria, Illinois, and now he spends his time beautifying the parks and playgrounds — and his wife raises orchids as a hobby — and she tends them as gently as a mother would her babies! She grows them by the hundreds. Her green-house is like a bit of Heaven — and her home garden is like a dream which she has made come true.

It is proverbial that visitors come for a few days to these islands of Hawaii, far out upon the Pacific, and miss their ships back home — and some never do go back! Aloha nui — welcome, over and over again — and love and good will — is the invisible spirit that gets to the heart of all, sooner or later. I wonder how much longer it will be before people will come to realize that Hawaii — not Europe — is the land of their dreams?

Old Home Week Murder

BY PHOEBE ATWOOD TAYLOR

The Characters
Asey Mayo, Cape Cod sleuth.
Kay Thayer, cute girl reporter

Yesterday: Kay reports a bruise on Jane's shoulder, possibly made by a gun kicking.
Diving into a pond, Kay finds a shotgun.

Chapter 27

The Woman in Possession

THE couple who had been diving
from the wharf took an intense interest in the shotgun Kay had salvaged.

"Gee, Sammy," the woman touched the trigger with her finger, "isn't it funny, huh? Isn't it funny? You know, I said I seen something down there, don't you remember? But I didn't think it was anything but a stick, maybe. Sammy, didn't you see something down there too?"

Didnt you think you seen something? I thought you said you did."
"Yeah," Sammy said. "I seen something. I didn't think it was a stick. I knew it was a gun. I was just going down for it when she came."

"See?" the woman said to Asey.
"We knew it was there, all the time!
Now, I don't want to get sore or anything, but we knew it was there,
and we was going to get it, so you—"

"It pierces my heart," Kay said.
"It shatters me to small bits, but neither of you possibly could have seen it. I didn't see it myself. I felt it. Therefore, if any claims arise—"

"Well, now just you look here!"
the woman raised her voice. "I guess we did see it too! I guess we knew it was there! I guess, if anyone's going to march off with that gun, we are. Do you hear that?"

"I think," Asey said, "they heard you over in Weesit Centre. And I rather think that you—"

"Fresh, huh?" Sammy demanded.
"Want to start trouble, huh? Well, listen! We seen that gun, and it's ours, and who do you think you are,
to—"

"Who do you think you are, you?"
the woman chimed in. "I never seen such a town as this! You hicks, you seem to think you—"

"And what's more," Sammy continued, paying no attention to the woman, "I lost a gun here in this lake last fall. My boat tipped over,
and I lost—"

"Fiddlesticks," Kay said, wondering why Asey didn't make any more of a stand. He was fishing around in his pockets, handicapped somewhat by the shotgun firmly clutched under one arm. "Fiddlesticks, and pooh. I don't believe a word of it. You just think you can bully us into handing the gun over to you, that's all,
and it's the most nonsensical notion I ever heard tell of."

"Listen!" Sammy shouted her into silence. "That gun is ours, see? It belongs to me. And we're going to have it, and take it—take—oh—"

He and the woman stared at the two badges Asey was nonchalantly
fixing on the lapel of his jacket.
One said, "Chief of Police," and the other was a state police badge.

"Oh, well," the woman said hurriedly, "maybe it ain't your gun, Sammy. Yours was a bigger gun. It was a much better gun, too. After all, if they're going to get sore, why what's the use of raising a rumpus,
I always say—"

Nerve and Gail
"It's been nice," Asey said, "havin'
this little chat with you. Any time you feel like continuin' it, you'll find me at my offices in the Town Hall.
Ask for Mr. Mayo. So long."

Looking terribly injured and outraged, the couple departed. They were muttering, but they were wise enough not to mutter very audibly.

"Well, I never!" Kay said. "How simply — what nerve! What gall!
Asey, did you ever in your life see anything like that?"

"Tourists," Asey said. "Just tourists. They'd call a cop if you stepped foot on the lawn of their own house
— always providin' they got either a lawn or a house, but travelin' puts the gypsy into 'em. I found some one day makin' off with my great grandmother's best hooked rug that I'd been airin' on the line."

"They were pinching it?"
"Oh, my no, what a horrid thought!" Asey said. "Of course not! They'd left me fifty cents. Offered me two-fifty before they left.
Didn't seem wise at that point to tell 'em how much Bill Porter made me insure it for — Kay, how in time did you find this gun?"

Kay smiled. "I was trying to make a nice spectacular dive to impress you, and it was shallower than I thought, and I bumped. You were right about the nasty bottom.
It's all muggy with weeds and things. I hit something in the weeds and grabbed at it for fun, and that's the story. Asey, is it the one?"

"It is."

Mark 15: 1-52

Tomorrow—The Trial

"But you haven't even looked at it!"

"See that tag? Says 'Anniversary Special' on it. And the gun ain't been in the water very long, either.
Under the circumstances, I think you've done a noble task. Will you finish your swim so's we can get back an' look into it in a large way?
While you're gettin' the mud off,
I'm goin' to put the car top up.
Our shower's just about hoverin'
over Ames's woods at this point."

"I'll hurry."

Asey strolled back to the car and put up the top, just as a few tenetative drops of rain began to fall.

Kay hurried back and wrapped herself in a white terrycloth robe.

"That's not bad, really," she said,
"that water, I mean. It's warm, but the air's getting cold. I have a feeling that the clambake is going to be rather soggy. Asey, how do you get the car out of here? Can you turn around?"

"I can ease her out." Asey backed into a thicket. "That's the one trouble with this beast, she can take a pile of turbin' on these lanes. The blow comes if someone d'cides to drive down that little path as we're comin' up it. Someone, say, like Sammy an' his girl friend." He leaned out to gauge his distance from a clump of scrub oaks. "An'
in that case we get a biff on the bumper or some scratched paint.
Oho. My goodness gracious! Shan't you die!"

"What's wrong now?" Kay asked as he stopped the car and pulled on the brake.

"Look yonder, will you? There's food for thought."

"Dear Miss Fairlawn"

Back over by the ice house another couple had appeared, but these two were no tourists. Not even a light drizzle could disguise the chubby figure of J. Arthur Brinley.

With him, a wrap over her bathing suit, was Madame Meaux.

"Tch, tch," Kay said. "Dear Miss Fairlawn, I always thought my husband was true to me, but recently
we had a guest staying to our house,
a Blonde Woman from Another World, and I find from my many warm friends that she was often seen in my husband's company, often in dishabille. Dear Miss Fairlawn, should I turn a deaf ear towards this entanglement, or should I bundle
the little weasel into the meat chop-
per. Answer soon."

Asey chuckled.

"I wrote answers to a column like that," Kay said, "for six months, and for six months the world seemed populated entirely with Blonde Women and Tall Dark Men and Sprightly Widows and simply fiendish children, all violently demented.
Asey, what is your Blonde Woman
doing with that Faithful Husband?"

"Considerin' we're some of the Virtuous Wife's many warm friends," Asey said, "we'll park right in this thicket an' eavesdrop. It's a wife's privilege to know all."

"They see us, don't they? They simply must!"

"They ought to, but they ain't looked over this way, an' the car's b'ind bushes — wonder if we ain't misjudged J. Arthur, Kay? See him pursue her behind the ice house?
All the same, I bet on Madame. This is what you might call a new slant
on Brother Brinley."

Madame Meaux strolled to a little patch of sandy shore, took off her robe and folded it with immense deliberation, while J. Arthur hovered restlessly in the background. With the same pointed deliberation, she walked to the edge of the water, dabbled a foot in it, and then walked doggedly into the pond.

J. Arthur called out something indistinguishable to her, but she never turned her head.

He called again, and then shrugged
and walked over to the ice house
and the old loading piers.

"I rather think," Kay said, "that J. Arthur has been forward. Maybe he's even made advances. Asey, by heaven — look!"

Brinley, after picking up a piece of broken oar, had walked out to the end of the piling and was prodding around almost exactly over the spot where Kay had found the shotgun.

"I think," Asey got out of the roadster, "that we'll go chat with Arthur. If he seen us leavin' he might feel we was miffed with him.
An' I don't know anyone I have kinder thoughts towards than Arthur. I shouldn't want him to think otherwise."

"Who," Kay agreed, "are we, to slink off like a couple of ships in the night?"

Brinley's head jerked up at the sound of their approach, and he began nervously to edge back to shore.

"Hi," Asey's voice was silky.

"Oh, hullo. How do you do? Er
— how do you do?"

"Fine," Asey said. "Fine." After all, he thought, J. Arthur had asked him twice.

"It looks rather like rain, doesn't it?" Brinley dropped the broken oar down on the sand.

"It is raining," Asey said truthfully.

Hopkins Plan to Move to Iowa Stirs Presidential Rumor

Warm Springs, Ga., April 5 (AP) — Secretary of Commerce Harry L. Hopkins' announcement here that he intended shortly to establish a voting residence in his boyhood home of Grinnell, Iowa, had Warm Springs flooded today with anxious inquiries from the politically-minded in Washington and elsewhere.

The fact that Hopkins is here as a house guest of President Roosevelt and has been mentioned frequently as the chief executive's first choice for the democratic presidential nomination in 1940 focused unusual attention on the commerce secretary's decision to move from New York state to Iowa.

Hopkins, in confirming reports which originated from "close friends" in Grinnell, denied flatly that politics had any bearing on the situation. He said he felt it his duty to his motherless seven-year-old daughter, Diane, to afford her a permanent home and could think of none better than the state of his birth.

Philadelpia, April 5 (AP) — A 98-year-old law formed the basis of a damage suit which Apex hosiery company officials said today they would press against the city of Philadelphia as the result of a sit-down strike at its mill two years ago.

Philadelphia Sued Under 98-Year-Old Law

Awarded $736,932 damages from a labor union Monday, the company brought another action against the Philadelphia county commissioners and other officials on grounds that they failed to provide adequate police protection. It was brought under a law of 1841 making Philadelphia, Allegheny (Pittsburgh) and Northampton counties liable for "property destroyed by mobs." The statute had not been invoked since the "know-nothing" political riots of 1850.

Her technique was simple, according to Ricciardi. She would marry or become friendly with a prospect, he said, persuade them to take out insurance and then poison them. When a victim died, she would collect a share of the insurance from other conspirators.

'Kiss of Death' Woman Linked To Poison Ring

Philadelphia, April 5 (AP)—A seductive brunette whose kiss, detectives said, lured men to their doom, was pictured today as a key figure in a plot to poison for insurance.

Detective Samuel Ricciardi, without disclosing the woman's name, indicated he would soon issue police circulars in her arrest as a conspirator in a ring held responsible for numerous deaths.

ROME-BERLIN AXIS LEADS IN AIR STRENGTH

Washington, April 5 (AP)—

Europe's new "stop Hitler" lineup unites imposing land and sea forces
but in the air, American experts said today, the most authoritative figures give the Rome-Berlin axis superiority.

Further, in the number of troops actually under arms, Germany and Italy together are shown by official reports to possess greater immediate striking power.

It is in trained reserves, naval might, and resources for a long struggle that an alliance of Great Britain, France and Poland appears to some experts to be better equipped—excluding the possibility of aid from Soviet Russia, Rumania
or other nations.

Because of the aerial armadas of Germany and Italy, Paris and London would be in effect "hostages," subject to the peril of destruction in the event of war, in the view of Major General George H.
Lynch, American chief of infantry.

Latest available official data give this picture of the relative strength
in land forces:

Great Britain, exclusive of dominions—208,500 men under arms, 573,500 including trained reserves,
France—725,000 active, 6,025,000

including reserves.
Poland—266,000 active, 1,713,000
including reserves.
Germany—930,000 active, 4,080,000
including reserves.
Italy—917,000 active, 7,412,000 including reserves.
Hungary, a possible Rome-Berlin
ally, is credited with 50,000 men under arms, and an additional 650,000 reserves.
The land forces of other powers
include:
Soviet Russia—1,500,000 active army, possibly 18,000,000 trained reserves.
Rumania—212,000 active, 1,828,000
including reserves.
Japan—1,500,000 or more under arms pressing the conflict with China and guarding the Siberian border, plus 4,748,000 reserves.
By comparison, the United States has some 185,000 men in its active army, and reserve forces of about 315,000, including the National Guard.
At sea, Great Britain and France
have warship tonnage of 2,842,000, compared with 1,180,000 for Germany and Italy.
The United States navy's latest revised comparative figures credit
Japan with 898,691 warship tonnage.
The American navy's total is 1,407-945 including vessels over-age and out of commission.
Aerial strength is the most difficult to measure, because of the attendant secrecy and the complex factor of production capacity which would determine prompt replacement of wartime losses.
By one authoritative estimate,
Germany and Italy could put at least 12,500 warplanes into the air immediately, compared to 7,700

British and French modern aircraft. Italo-German productive capacity is rated higher also,
though Britain has been gearing her plane output to greater speeds.
Using 10 as an index, one report to the War department thus rated
air strength of leading powers:
Germany, 10, Italy 6, Great Britain
5, United States 4, and France 2.
Relatively speaking, Japan and Poland were out of the picture.
